Lee Harper, city engineer at Quincy, Ill., offers a substitute for coal. He says to use ordinary building brick. Soak the bricks in coal oil and use them for fuel. When the oil burns out the bricks may be soaked again. He declares this is cheaper fuel than coal. He says t. fill a barrel or trough with licks to be kept soaking until needed. Mr. Harper does not claim to have originated this idea, but passes it along and says the brick so treated may be used in stoves or furnace .-

Audrey listened anxiously. Surely there came the unaccustomed throb of a motor somewhere along the hill road. Didn't they know, she thought, that no cars ever used it, that it signagged along the edge of the ravine with a sheer drop of two hundred and eighty feet to the bettom of the siver? She rose, the tin pint pails filled with huckleberries dangling from a rope around her waist, and pushed back

"Say!" she called as loudly as she could. "Say! Look out for the road!" She held her breath for an answer, but the hum of the meter drowned her beginning of the winter term, which voice, and as the low gray roadster ewept around the bend, it hit a broken place in the road, and was gone crashing down into 'he tree tops before she

So adventure and excitement became unexpected guests in Catamount valley, and for weeks there lay in the Pendleten cabin a woman with wide, quired. Every student entering sember, dark eyes and slient lips, who for these short courses, which groped her way back from the shadows almost regretfully.

Audrey hoped the curly blond hair and little shortcropped mustache in the army uniform. There had been only two boys to go out from the valley to wear khaki, and she felt an added interest in this youngster who seemed to have escaped the perils of war to become acquainted with death in Catamount ravine.

Then one day, when she was helping Mrs. Stewart to slip into a negligee ever a felded leather case in her smalphotograph of the same face, only younger, and this time its owner wore

"Why, I don't know," Audrey answered eagerly. "I liked him best. The old man swore terribly when they were carrying him, and this one never said a thing and they had to get him up with ropes."

Mrs. Stowert shuddered. She tried to put from her the reality of that last drive that was to have ended in a finality so different to the one that overtook them all. Ivan had been very farm shop equipment. A study stient. > It was the fourth week when he came, the young one, as Audrey always called him to berseif. It had been the chauffeur who had died, he told them Mr. Radineff was deing well, in fact intended resturning to New York on Monday and sailing the following week. Mrs. Stewart never even colored at his news, and Authrey wondered which one she cared for.

Then followed weeks of enchantment. Mrs. Stewart had insisted on only charge to the boys entering making the journey back to the city for special treatment, she said, and while she was gone Dick Granger stayed at the cabin. Her father liked one dollar for the term. The only him. It reused him to have some one to talk to, and Dick liked to go over his collections with him and help him. It was such an old story to Audrey she never realisted what a strange life they led up on the side of Shamokin mountain, she sand the old scholarly

"It's just always been this way," she told Dick. "I was born right here, and my mother died hore. I love it all, and I've been away to school twice, but I always long to come back. It's so free, den't you know? Why, your car was the first that I was ever come over our road. Everybooky knew how dangerous it was. It's liveky you're alive." "Isn't it?" Dick snalled down at her standing six feet two: in his lieutenant uniform. "Do you knew, I wish I could always stay here now. I haven't any real home. My people; were New Yorkers, but my mether'st married again, and I'm rather the oddl gosling. I used to wish when we we're coming back that I had some one who was waiting for me over here."

"Wasn't-" Audrey thecked herself. Possibly Mrs. Stewart would not like to have her use her mitme. But Dick caught the inference and shook his

Should Be Quarantined.

Many physicians believe that anyone who has a bad cold should be completely isolated to prevent other members of the family and associates from contracting the disease, as colds are about as catching as measles. One thing sure—the sooner one rids himsel of a cold the less danger, and you will look a good while before you find a better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to aid you in curing a cold.

Life's a thing of rough and tumble, Life's a thing of laugh and grum-

Life's a thing of go and hustle, Life's a thing of rush and bustle, Life's a play of brain and muscle, Life's all jump and buzz and whitl.

Notice To Farmers!

I will now devote my entire time in buying cattle, hogs, etc. If you have anything to sell see me or call telephone, residence No. 62, business No. 116.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the car. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be deatroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.
